FÉVRIER 2012
VICTOR BOULLET
ANSTRUTHER SCOTLAND

mud me
the soil of my parents
under that nail
I wash I clean
spine broken from a time stood still on a stolen table
harvest
as if

Anstruther Scotland
separated by a river

lost a scarf decorated with the union jack in pieces found that scarf tightened around the neck ate that soil
dug that hole

the sparrow the harrow the sorrow ask the ploughman for the time pruning of the inactive self mature me became

that recovering fist
my foot

death of a familiar thought need to eat
throw stone
while I speak

split me in two
